

Stephanie Mehta CEO Fast Company & Inc. Magazine

About Stephanie:

Stephanie Mehta is chief executive officer and chief content officer of Mansueto Ventures, publisher of Inc. and Fast Company. From March 2018 to January 2022 she served as editor-in-chief of Fast Company, where she oversaw digital, print, and live journalism. Under her leadership Fast Company was a National Magazine Award finalist in design for three years in a row, and the title added two new annual conferences. From February 2016 to February 2018 she was a deputy editor at Vanity Fair, where she helped produce the annual New Establishment list and conference, launched a new female founders conference, and edited cover stories on Brie Larson, Jennifer Lawrence, and the Marvel Cinematic Universe. From 2014 to 2016, she led the editorial conference division of Bloomberg Media. She worked at Fortune from 2000 to 2014, rising from writer to deputy managing editor, the No. 2 spot on the masthead. She worked at the The Wall Street Journal from 1994 to 2000 and started her journalism career at The Virginian-Pilot and Ledger Star newspapers in Norfolk, Va.

Mehta sits on the boards of the American Society of Magazine Editors and Airbel Impact Lab, the research and innovation arm of the International Rescue Commission. In 2022 she received the New York Women in Communications Matrix Award, celebrating women in the arts and communications.

She received a BA in English and an MS in journalism from Northwestern University.